I have been a resident of Fullerton for 27 years. During those years my wife, our children and I have enjoyed the many benefits of living in such a great city.

Entering this race has the sole purpose of ensuring that Fullerton continues to be a great city in which to live, work and play. We have so many assets. First among those assets are great schools and people. The city will endure and prosper if we continue to provide an environment where all can flourish.

If the people of Fullerton give me the opportunity to serve them on the city council, I will apply the same skills that I have learned over the years in the corporate world, in self-employment and what I call the University of Life to solve the problems which we are now facing.

Diligence and humility will characterize my work for the City in forging new ways of accomplishing fiscal goals while maintaining the highest and most professional level of service to the citizens.

I believe that with right conservative leadership, discipline, transparency, and fiscal responsibility even better days for Fullerton are ahead of us.
